

Managers' Monday Memo

I am thankful for each of you, it does not matter if you make my day brighter or harder, I am still thankful. You give me a reason to keep trying, to keep learning, and to grow each day. We are always going to face challenges; what matters is if we do it with grace or grimace.

My family will be here Saturday so I know you will understand that I am going to be with them and not have a memo next week, I am sure you could use a break too! I am so looking forward to hugging my mom, my daughter, daughter-in-law, and my adorable Brayden. Family is what matters most and although family does not have to be blood related, it always feels good to have people that love you.

Over this next week I will be wrapping up items and making lists for December. The office will be closed on Thanksgiving day and the Friday after. You can always reach out to security or myself if you have an urgent need.
