

Labor Days of Love THANK YOU FOR A GREAT WEEKEND!

Date 09/02/2024

Dear Gentle Readers

Please know that due to days off scheduling, training, and tours of the campground the office might need to close for a short period of time. We do everything in our power to avoid this and hope you will be patient as we continue to improve our processes, and get Vaughn trained. We are working on a set schedule for the winter and next season to avoid this in the future. We should be completely done with interruptions of office hours by the middle of September.

Annual meeting, thank you all for making it great, we will get everything added to the website and printed in the office. We do want to try and become more digital as paper is very expensive. We understand not everyone likes the computer age and we will always accommodate you if you need anything in print.

Please contact Vaughn @ V.Barley@gmail.com to update your email, phone number and

A philosophy professor once stood before his class with a large empty jar. He filled the jar with large rocks and asked his students if the jar was full.

The students said that yes, the jar was full.

He then added small pebbles to the jar and asked again, "Is the jar full now?"

The students agreed that the jar was indeed full.

The professor then poured sand into the jar and asked again.

The students then agreed that the jar was finally full.

The professor went on to explain that the jar signifies one's life.

The rocks are equivalent to the most important things in your life, such as family, health, and relationships.

And if the pebbles and the sand were lost, the jar would still be full, and your life would still have a meaning.

The pebbles represent the other things that matter in your life, such as your work, school, and house.

These things often come and go and are not permanent or essential to your overall well-being.

And finally, the sand represents the remaining small stuff and material possessions in your life. These things don't mean much to your life as a whole and are likely only done to waste time or get small tasks accomplished.

The metaphor here is that if you start with putting sand into the jar, you will not have room for rocks or pebbles.

This holds true for the things you let into your life too.

If you spend all your time on the small and insignificant things, you will run out of room for the things that are important.

So, to have a more effective life, you should prioritize important things in your life and then worry about pebbles and sand at a later time.

Wrapping up the season and Stephanie's first 60 days. I am still delighted to be here, even with some of the challenges. I love the town of Slippery Rock, the peace and serenity of the area, and the ability to feed a giraffe 10 minutes from my home. I miss my family but do not miss the heat of Florida at all.

Lot clean up continues to be an issue. Please complete all clean up, grass cutting, lot organization, construction, and beautification by the end of September. If you are not here, you need to hire someone to complete these tasks.

My future hopes, I hope we can come back and have more fun and a little less drama. I hope that whatever is hurting you is healed, I hope that whatever ails you is cured, I hope whatever makes you smile you receive in excessive abundance!

Thank you for being so kind to me!
